Small Business Wins Big Awards

On January 1, 2005, Medical Animatics, Inc. co-founders, Kurtis Rush and Harlon Wilson, made creating empowering employment opportunities for the best and brightest university graduates a primary strategic objective of their young technology firm. Yesterday, the company's continuing commitment to Indy's young professionals was recognized as Legal Animatics, Inc. (the Parent Company of Medical Animatics, Inc.) was honored at the 2006 Solutions Conference as the recipient of the 2006 IUPUI Solution Center's Outstanding Internship Award.

The Solution Center was founded in December 2003 as part of Indiana University's submission to the Lilly Endowment's Initiative to Promote Opportunity in attempt to create a community-friendly gate to the university and develop partnerships between government, business, universities, and the community in order to promote a collaborative approach towards economic development. Since its inception in 2003, the Center has facilitated over 570 internships, research collaborations, and projects. Medical Animatics, Inc. was selected as one of 84 central Indiana businesses to receive Venture Fund grants. The company used the grants to fund three internships for IUPUI students, one from the IU Kelley School of Business and two from the IU School of Informatics. Medical Animatics, Inc. has also individually funded two other internships.

Of the over 570 research collaborations and internships funded by the Solution Center over the past two years, Medical Animatics, Inc. was selected as one of six 2006 Solution Center Outstanding Internship Award recipients. The award honors organizations that provide students with exceptional experiential learning opportunities that go far beyond the classroom as nominated by the student interns. Medical Animatics, Inc. Marketing Intern, Jonathon Wright, was also recognized as a Solution Center's 2006 Outstanding Intern. Interns were nominated by the organizations in which they served.

"My internship at Medical Animatics, Inc. offered an unrivaled amount of practical experience, flexibility, and opportunities to meet and network with key leaders in the Indianapolis Medical and Life Sciences community. My mentored assignments in research, marketing, and brand development for the firm were exceptional experiential learning opportunities," stated Jonathon Wright, Medical Animatics, Inc.'s Marketing Intern from the IU Kelley School of Business. "Management's commitment to creating opportunities for young professionals and its respect for the value of employees, interns, and partners within the organization was obvious from the second I walked in the door."

Medical Animatics, Inc. is making good on its promise to proactively create opportunities for central Indiana's best and brightest young professionals. The company has created a number of full-time positions for university graduates as well as internships in complex animation, creative design, Macromedia Flash technologies, and business administration for talented students from the IU School of Informatics and Kelley School of Business. There seems to be no sign of slowing down, either. Medical Animatics, Inc. continues to promote the creation of jobs and economic development in Indy's growing Bio-crossroads and Life-Sciences hubs.

"We are very excited to receive this award from the IUPUI Solution Center," said Harlon Wilson, President and CEO of Medical Animatics, Inc. "Creating opportunities for local talent has always been a priority for Legal Animatics and Medical Animatics, Inc. We are enthusiastic about being recognized by the community for our involvement and look forward to continuing our relationship with the university and the Solution Center."
